

Rebalancing Society by Henry Mintzberg

“We have to leave behind the linear politics of left, right, and center, to understand that a balanced society, like a stable stool, has to rest on three solid legs: a public sector of political forces rooted in respected governments, a private sector of economic forces based on responsible businesses, and a plural sector of social forces manifested in robust communities.”

So writes world renowned management thinker Henry Mintzberg, who in his latest publication—a free "electronic pamphlet" entitled Rebalancing Society—calls for radical renewal of societies that have been falling out of balance, toward private sector domination, since the collapse of the Soviet bloc.

To celebrate this launch, we would like to invite you to attend these two events on Thursday, March 27, 2014 at the McGill Faculty Club:

Rebalancing Society – What’s next?

Come join Henry Mintzberg and L. Ian MacDonald, Editor of Policy magazine, as they discuss the need for rebalancing, and ask your own questions about how we can create a balanced society.

Time: 5:45pm to 7:00pm (a cocktail reception will begin at 5:00pm)

Location: Ballroom, McGill Faculty Club, 3450 McTavish Street

This event will be webcast live and will be taped and broadcast on Canal Savoir.

Creating a balanced society by 2050: An envisioning exercise with Henry Mintzberg

What could a balanced society look like in the year 2050? How would we get there? Come share your ideas and create a vision for the future through a solutions-focused idea jam. This interactive bilingual event will involve roundtable group discussions and feedback from Henry Mintzberg.

Time: 7:15pm to 9:00pm (a light dinner will be provided)

Location: Dining Room, McGill Faculty Club, 3450 McTavish Street

Participants are required to read pages 1-76 of Rebalancing Society before this exercise.
