

I am pleased to present the preliminary program for the 2014 edition of the Journées dentaires internationales du Québec. It is preliminary in that it does not contain all the details on the rooms where the presentations will be given, but almost final in that it lists all the planned lectures and workshops and all the topics to be covered.

As in past years, the convention will be spread out over five days: three pre-convention days for which registration is limited, from Friday to Sunday, and two days of lectures and an exhibition, on Monday and Tuesday.

The highly experienced Organizing Committee members have put together a wide variety of subjects for you this year. The presentations will cover all dentistry disciplines and have been selected to focus on day-to-day concerns in dental practice and our patients' needs.

I invite you to consult this program, to choose these topics you would like to learn more about and to let us know what you are interested in by pre-registering. That way you will not only guarantee yourself a spot in the limited-access pre-convention courses, but also help us choose the most appropriate rooms for each of the convention lectures.

I look forward to seeing you in May 2014. In the meantime, from one ODQ member to another, please accept my best wishes.

Denis Robert, DMD
Chair of the 2014 JDIQ Planning Committee
